By volunteering, students help to enhance their skills and become well-rounded individuals. As a matter of fact, volunteering offers students the opportunity to acquire useful skills, understand the community you live in, and improve community life. In fact a student can make a huge impact by volunteering in community service. I would say that participating in community service allows students to be active in their communities, while also leaving a positive impact on society on any scale. As a result, by engaging in community service, you make connections that positively influence your mood, and can aid in coping with depression.

Example

In my opinion, when an animal is dying from hunger, it is fraught with danger. If the tiger is displeased, it will show it with a growl or take a stalking position to convey it. Feasibly, the hikers are in threat of being attacked by the tiger. Despite the fact that they are aware that they are in danger, they will maintain their composure and self-control. The woman will drizzle with her pepper spray canister. They will sprint as quickly as they can until they can land on a more secure hiding spot, all the while yelling for help. They will be safeguarded from the tiger's attack by rescuers. They'll never forget the near-death encounter they had in the woods.

Question/s: What do you think the hikers will do?

1. The three friends went hiking.
2. Suddenly, a tiger appeared.
3. The three friends stop and they are thinking about what to do.

In a globalized society, where mobility is empowering, acquiring a language is a sublime benefit. Language skills boost your ability to execute well in other academic fields. Researches show that the benefits of studying a different language involve higher grades on regulated exams in math, reading comprehension, diction, and vocabulary by multilingual learners compared to the scores of monolingual learners. Moreover, a multilingual capability is a competitive edge to promote job prospects. In the long run, multilingual explorers can revolutionize a journey overseas, relate and communicate with the people in a way that is often rare to those without the language. Given these points, acquiring a second language equips you to live up to people's expectations and increase various mental abilities at all ages.

Foreign language study should be required.
