Example Dear Sir/ Madam, I placed an order for a vacuum cleaner from your online store last October 10 and received it after a week. It seems that the product is defective and that it is not functioning properly. The power indicator is blinking and after a few minutes, it turned off suddenly. I read your terms and conditions, and I am well aware that customers are entitled to have a replacement for a defective product. I attached my proof of purchase. I look forward to getting a response from you the soonest. Sincerely, Lory Park

Example

The woman, I sense, will second-guess herself because she wants to help the unknown person, but her father's advice comes to mind not to talk to strangers, particularly because she is a woman. Being cautious rather than sorry is usually a win-win situation. We have no idea when the wicked mind is going to strike. In this circumstance, taking a risk is not worth it. The woman will then pass the stranger, but she will still phone the cops to give the stranger aid. Finally, she will never forget her very pleasant and enjoyable excursion. Her delight will never be masked by the decision she made about the stranger. She will be homed safe and sound.

Example Dear Students, Starting next semester, students cannot bring gadgets to school. Many teachers have complained that gadgets distract students during class. Most students do not listen to their teachers. Instead, they play games or surf the Internet. Also, there have been many gadget thefts recently. We hope that prohibiting gadgets will make the students more responsible with their studies. Failure to comply with the policy will be subject to disciplinary action. Respectfully yours, Rachel Park Campus Dean
