Conclusion

Example

Being socially interrelated to others can mitigate uneasiness, pressure, anxiety, and melancholy, encourage self-worth, provide warmth and pleasure, counter isolation, and even add years to your life. On the contrary, technology has altered the way we live, work, and socialize. FOMO, or the Fear of Missing Out, is the usual issue and often results in non-stop monitoring of social media sites. Consequently, the notion that you might miss the bus on social media if you're not online can influence your self-confidence, provoke anxiety, and lead to greater social media use. Posting so many selfish and deep thoughts on social media can generate toxic self-centeredness. In addition, this will block people from real-life reciprocities. In the same way, high usage of Facebook, Snap chat, and Instagram intensify feelings of loneliness.

Modern social media make people less socially active.

An office worker dealing with an irate client.

Question/s: What are your predictions for the office worker's actions?

1. The office worker walked into her cubicle with a smile on her face.
2. Suddenly, an irate client called.

3. The office worker answers the call and she's attentively listening to the client's concerns.

Example

Every complaint, I understand, has a foundation. Complaining is a way for people to communicate their dissatisfaction with others and circumstances. Problems, on the other hand, can be resolved if two parties communicate in a courteous manner. The office worker has been well-trained in dealing with such situations. She will initially ask the client to take it easy and go into details of her issues. Then, she will respond in a professional manner, with no interjections. Her cherry-picked quote has indeed been Patience is a Virtue.. The client will then apologize for being nasty to her. The irate client's issue will be addressed. The office worker will indulge herself with something like a cup of coffee to re-energize her day.

Image	Pros of wearing school uniforms Introduction  1. Student's safety 2. Student identification 3. Cost savings 4. _____  Conclusion Cons of wearing school uniforms Introduction  1. Lack freedom of expression. 2. Can cause discomfort 3. Raise concerns about the cost. _____  Conclusion
Example As we can see, school uniform is the same clothing that all students in school wear when preparing for school. Each school has its own school uniform, it can be one or more. Each school's attire is different from that of the other school, as this is one of the ways that children can be identified by their attire. Which child is studying in which school can be easily recognized by the uniform. As a matter of fact, wearing school uniforms has an impact on students' minds and they feel responsible and maintain discipline. For example, having a uniform helps students and parents fight peer pressure. If there is no uniform in school, students may think that they are wearing appropriate clothes, and even wearing this type of clothing is more expensive to buy.
